THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE
WASHINGTON 25

January 5 1955.

The Honorable
Allen W. Dulles
Director, Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Dulles:

In National Security Council Document 5427 the Department of Commerce is directed to activate the program submitted by I.C.I.S. in its report on the study of problem 64. This includes the activation of an Interdepartmental Committee on International Exchanges of Publications. It is recommended we undertake an exploration of various phases of the problem of exchange of publications, both government publications and those originating outside of government. We plan to carry out this recommendation through the Office of Strategic Information working in conjunction with the Interdepartmental Committee. The report attached to the National Security Council Directive recommends that your Department have a representative on this committee.

I would appreciate it therefore if you would designate a member of your staff to represent the Central Intelligence Agency on this committee. It is suggested that your designated member contact Mr. Karl Honaman, Director, Office of Strategic Information, as soon as practicable.

You will note that this deals with the third phase of the National Security Council Directive to the Department of Commerce. The second phase, having to do with the guidance of executive agencies on publications has been activated and the Interdepartmental Committee dealing with that phase is already at work.

Sincerely yours,

Secretary of Commerce
